RACE DIFFICULTY IN ST. LOUIS

THE citizens of St. Louis a few days ago held a special election to decide whether or not to sequester the negro population of that city and the proposition carried by a vote of 52,000 to 17,000. Members of the colored race in Tonopah have received notification from St. Louis negroes that they will carry the matter to the supreme court of the State of Missouri and, if unsuccessful there, to the court of last resort.

Perhaps some object is found in St. Louis to an admixture of races in the residential districts. It is not desirable in any community. But it hardly seems probable that the colored people would intrude there any more than they do in other towns. Every community where there is a mixed population has its quarter for each. This is by preference of the nationalities themselves. But if a negro buys and pays for a home between two white families and is obedient to the law, there is nothing in the constitution to prevent him and no legal process with which he may be served.

FRENCH-CANADIANS AND THE WAR

WHILE there has been some lack of enthusiasm among the French-Canadians of the remoter sections of Quebec, the Gallic citizens of Canada have on the whole displayed quite as much patriotism and, in proportion to population, have enlisted quite as numerous as those sons of the Dominion who are of English, Scotch and Irish descent. In the South African war the proposal to send a Canadian contingent abroad aroused much opposition among the French-Canadians. The Hon. J. Israel Tarte, then Minister of Public Works, opposed the project on constitutional grounds, and the editorial utterances in his son's paper, La Patrie of Montreal, were decidedly antagonistic. Many other French journals joined in the clamor, and a French-Canadian member of parliament resigned his seat and was returned by acclamation. Except for this, the French-Canadian opposition was of a passive nature, and was ignored by the government. In the present conflict, with the French and British fighting side by side as allies, there has been no such conflict of racial interests. Such opposition to Canadian participation in the struggle as exists among the Gallic sons of the Lady of the Snows is largely based on religious grounds. French-Canadians have been little affected by the religious revolt in their fatherland. With the exception of a few intellectuals in Montreal and Quebec, they are devout Catholics almost to a man. The regulation of religious affairs in France, which they look upon as "persecution of the church," has aroused in the breasts of some a hatred of the republican government of "infidel" France. Such considerations have little effect on the great masses of French-Canadians, however, for they perceive in the possibilities of a German triumph a menace to Canada and its institutions which is intolerable to think of. In addition to the purely French-Canadian regiments, there are thousands of their men in other regiments—some of them with Scots and fighting in kilts.

THE HOLD-OVER FLIES

THERE are "hold-over flies" or "winter flies" which have been hibernating during the cold weather, and which wake up at the first warm sign of spring.

"Don't trust the cold to kill them," and "Don't assume that they are dead when you find them lying on floors or window sills in unused rooms. They are playing possum, and will recover when the temperature rises. Clean up the house and give special attention to every out-of-the-way place where flies may lurk. Make sure that there is nothing left which may harbor their eggs," says an exchange.

If you don't adopt this strategy, and start now, here is what you may be up against, according to the computation of experts: A female fly surviving the winter may be expected to begin laying eggs in April. Her progeny will begin laying in May. Their progeny will be laying by June 1. We may reckon on five crops by the first of October. The first crop alone is big enough, but succeeding generations quickly run far beyond the grasp of the human imagination. If all the eggs hatched and developed into mature flies, the offspring of that one fly would amount, by October 1, to the appalling number of 131, 220,000,000,000,000.

That number of flies, it is said, if caught and pressed compactly together would occupy a space of 250,000 cubic feet. That is to say, they would probably fill solidly, from cellar to attic, about ten ordinary houses. Of course, the eggs don't all hatch, and the little larvae and pupae don't all grow up, and the adult flies don't all carry out this theoretical laying program. If they did, all other forms of life in the world would soon be buried under an overwhelming avalanche of flies, and all the foodstuff in the world would be devoured by them. But the facts are impressive enough without this mathematical nightmare.

The moral is plain. Swat the first flies, and you'll have only tens to kill instead of tens of thousands.

It is now open season for newspapers in Nevada, a season recurring each two years, but with greater freedom in the years divisible by four, such is 1916. One of the latest to accept the freedom of the custom is W. T. McNeil, who has resuscitated his Western Home Builder and will keep it in active operation until at least the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November.
